Federal Agency Records Management Reporting

One of the National Archives and Records Administration's (NARA) most important responsibilities is to report on the state of federal records management. Effective records management programs in federal agencies ensure the preservation of and access to permanently valuable records of the Federal Government.

NARA requires three related but separate submissions: Senior Agency Official for Records Management (SAORM) Annual Report, the annual Records Management Self-Assessment (RMSA), and the Federal Electronic Records and Email Management (FEREM) Report. The information provided by agencies is consolidated into the annual Federal Agency Records Management Report.

Records Management Self-Assessment (RMSA)

Each year, Federal agencies are required to conduct a Records Management Self-Assessment (RMSA) and submit the findings to NARA. The goal of the self-assessments is to determine whether Federal agencies are compliant with statutory and regulatory records management requirements.

All reports prior to 2016 were published as an individual RMSA Annual Report.

Senior Agency Official for Records Management (SAORM) Reports

This report demonstrates how agencies are achieving the goals of M-19-21 and other important strategic initiatives. Please visit the SAORM Report page for the individual agency reports from 2020 to the present. All older reports are available on the SAORM Annual Reports Previous Years' Web page.

Federal Electronic Records and Email Management Reports

The Federal Electronic Records and Email Management reports are submitted annually as part of the overall Federal Agency Records Management annual reporting.

NARA uses a risk-based maturity model survey to measure electronic records and email management by Federal agencies. Each part is scored separately and gives its own maturity model score. The maturity model score is determined by adding the total number of points for all questions and dividing the total number of points by the number of questions. The number of points is 76 for Part 1 and 76 for Part 2. A maturity model score of 4 for Part 1 and 4 for Part 2 assigns a separate high, medium, or low risk rating. The risk rating for electronic records and email effectively on a scale of risk 3 to 4.
