Records and Information Management Assessments

What is a Records and Information Management Assessment?

Based on the statutory authority outlined in 44 U.S.C. 2904(c), NARA's Oversight and Reporting Division established the Records and Information Management Assessment process in 2018 as a way to evaluate how specific issues affect RM programs, policies, processes, and procedures across the Federal government. A Records and Information Management Assessment is a concise study and evaluation of a particular topic as it relates to records and information management within federal agencies. Completed reports will be published below by fiscal year.

Role of Participating Agencies

Unlike RM inspections that focus on agency compliance and corrective actions, assessments were designed to focus on the real-life experiences agencies have with the specific assessment topic. Hence, assessments are shorter in duration and require less effort from participating agencies than inspections.

Assessment Objectives

1. Evaluate a specific topic, policies, processes, and procedures
2. Understand the real-life experiences agencies have with the specific assessment topic and RM
3. Gauge the efficacy of Federal Records Management with relevant Federal Records Management
4. Analyze assessment data to identify trends, gaps, and opportunities for improvement in the assessment topic and the
